

RJY Dashboard

Third year evaluation (July 2021 – July 2024)

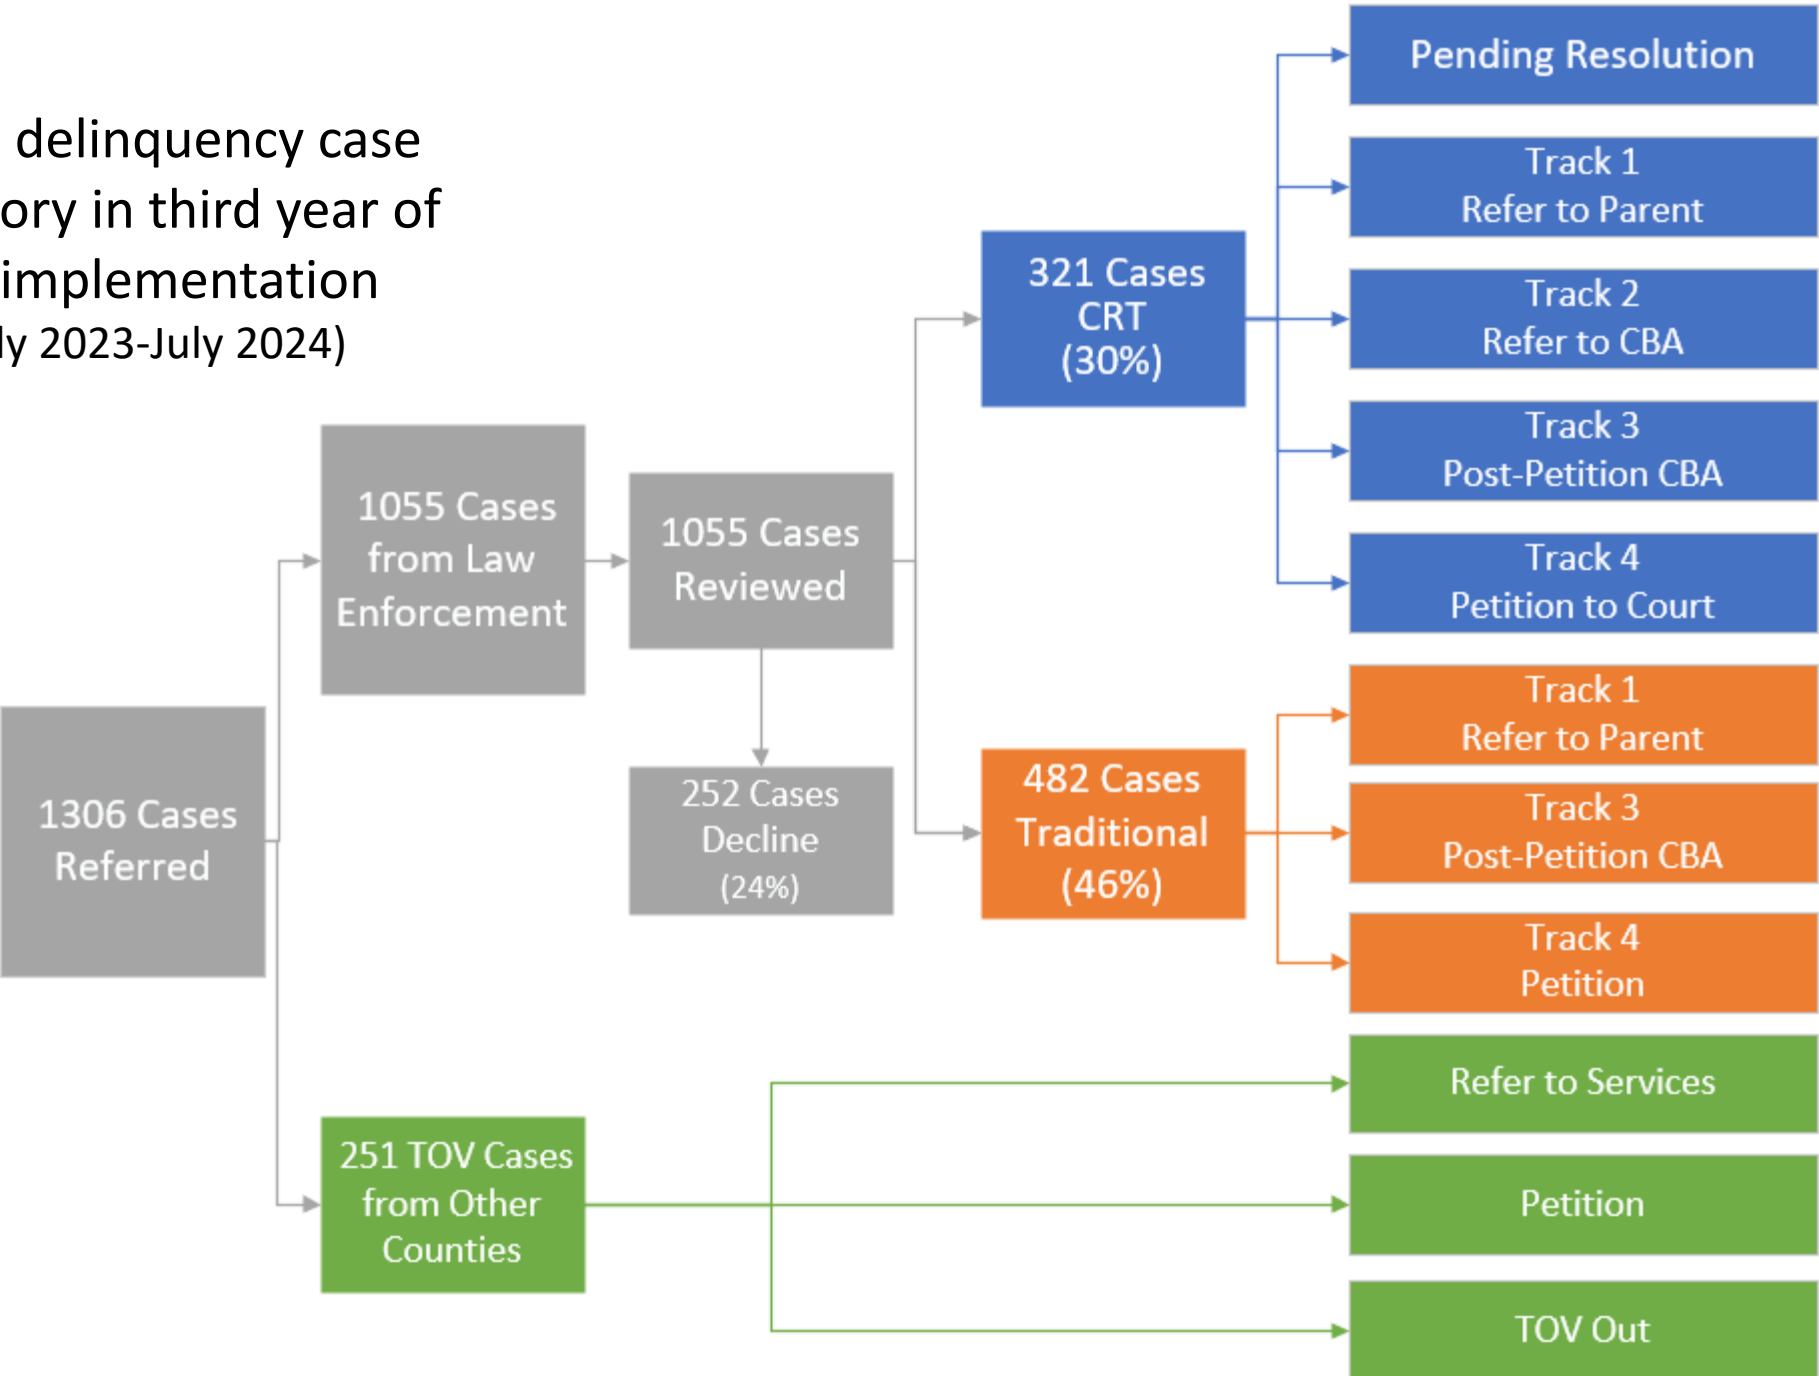

Youth delinquency case trajectory in first year of RJY implementation (July 2021-July 2022)

Youth delinquency case trajectory in second year of RJY implementation (July 2022-July 2023)

Youth delinquency case trajectory in third year of RJY implementation (July 2023-July 2024)

Collaboratively reviewed cases continue to most often result in referral to community-based accountability (CBA)

Decisions made during collaborative review

More youth accessed community-based accountability (CBA) in RJY Year 3

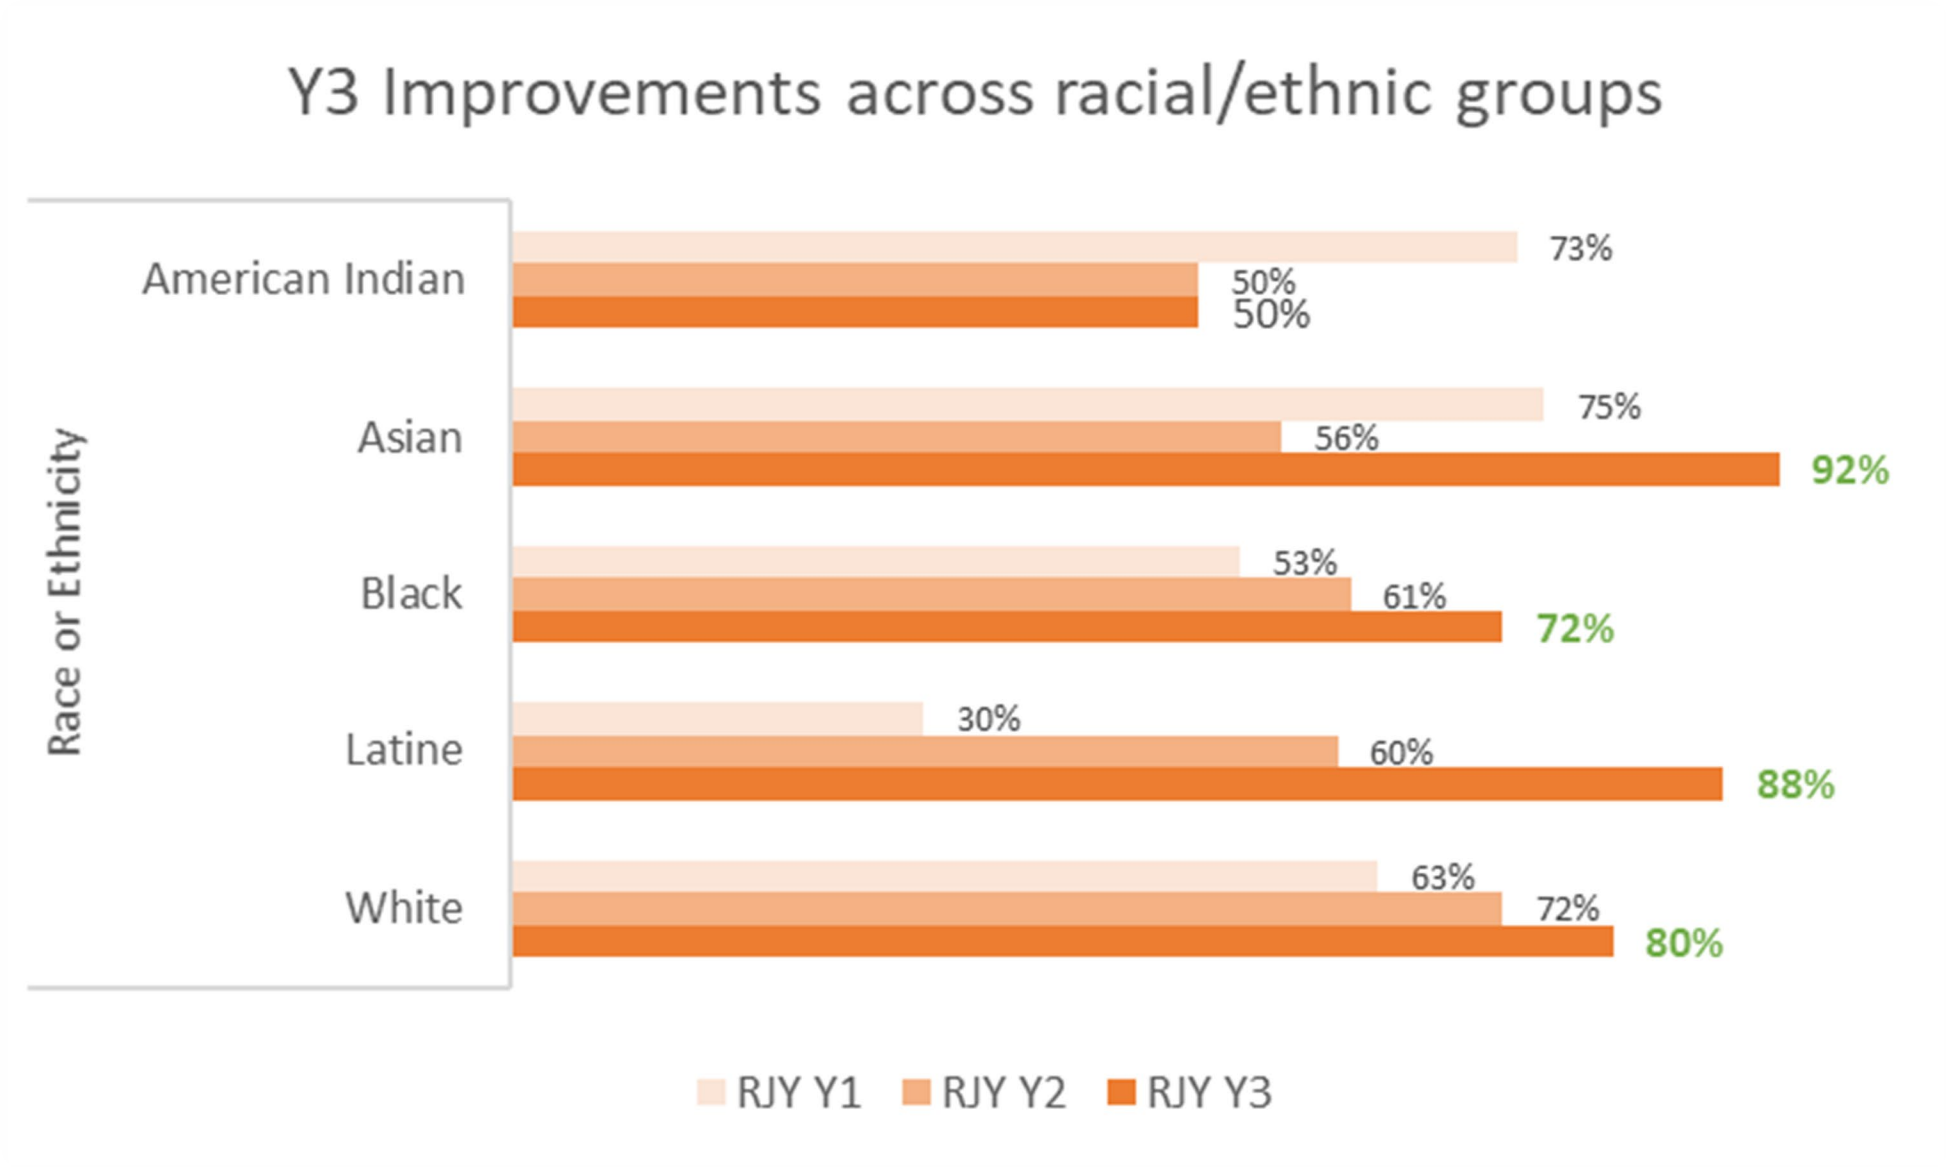

Racial disparities in youth offered community-based accountability

Racial disparities in youth succeeding in community-based accountability

Disaggregated success rates in community accountability

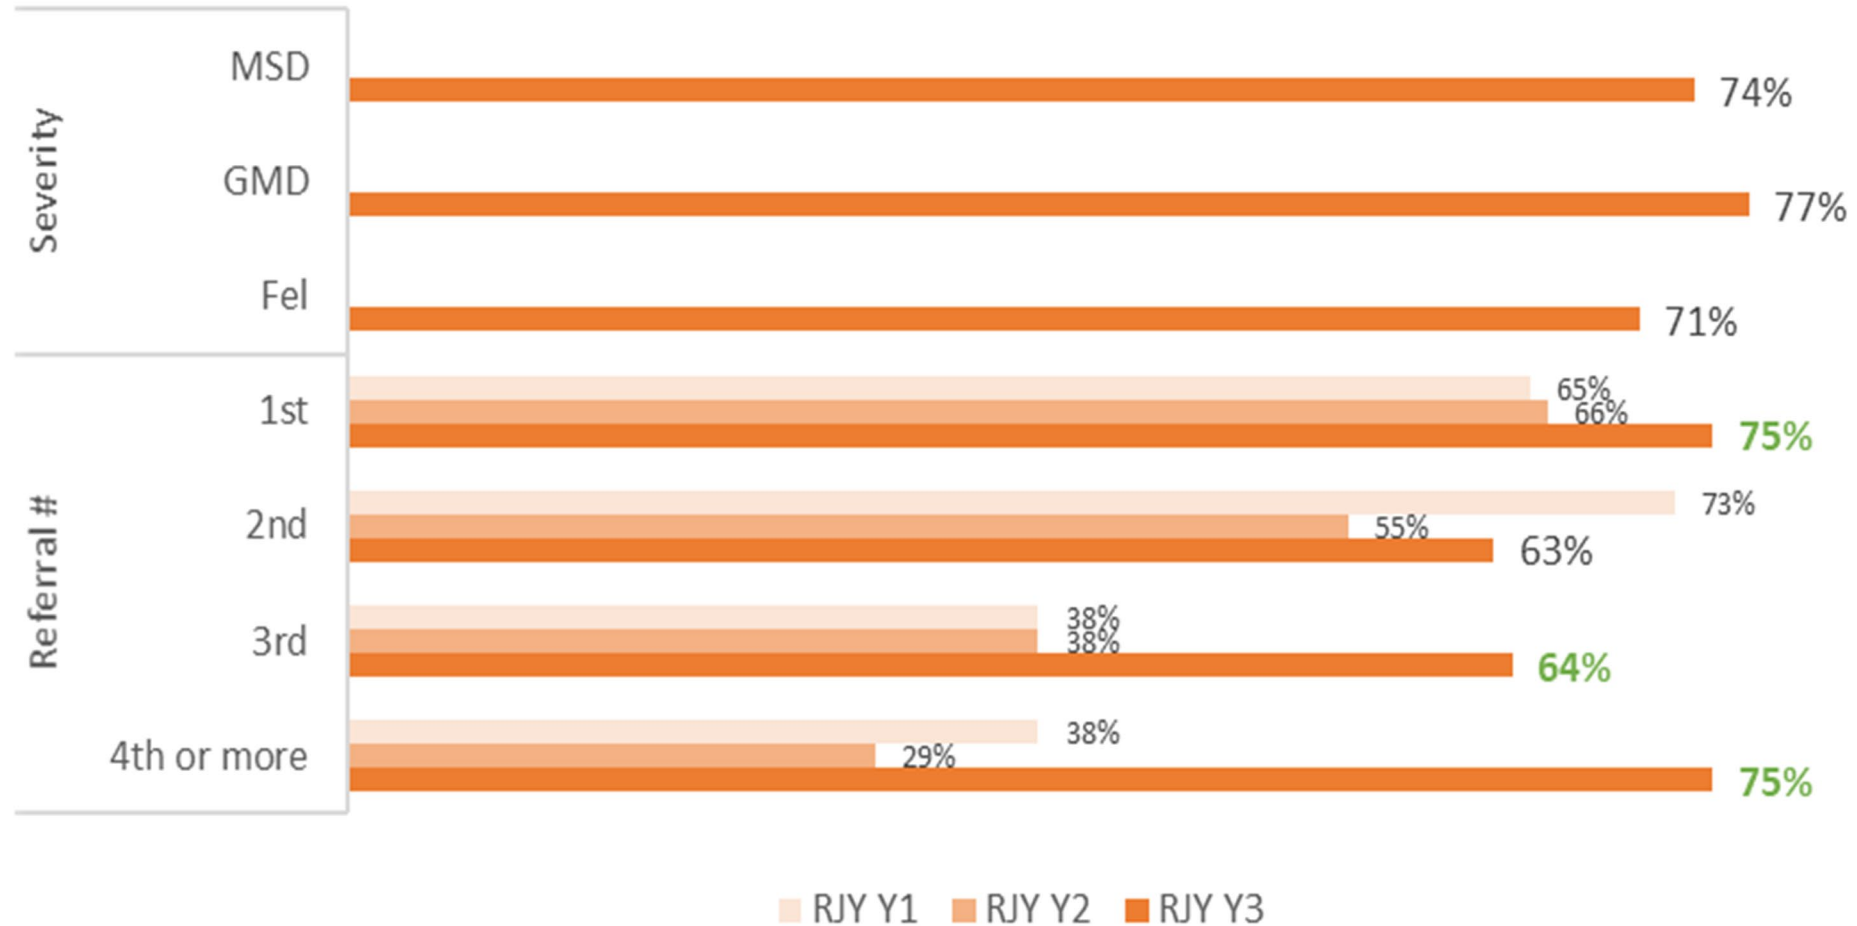

Disaggregated success rates in community accountability

Y3 improvements for all age groups and for males

Disaggregated success rates in community accountability

Y3 improvements for 1st, 3rd and 4th+ referrals

Primary decisions on youth cases referred by law enforcement over time

Reflections from community providers...

Youth had a really good relationship with his mom that was evident during the seminar. When he realized his apology letter was going to his mom, it made an impact on him as he figured out that his actions had an affect on her as well. His mother really cared for him and made sure that he was on top of his community service which helped him get through the program efficiently.

Youth expressed empathy and reflected on that it wasn't even her fight. She agreed that she would not engage in senseless posts on social media. Mom was supportive of helping her daughter stay out of the mess friends group. She encouraged her daughter to focus on track and schoolwork.

Youth expressed empathy in his actions and understanding that he could of reacted differently. Youth understands its important to understands his emotions and learn to process them in a positive way that doesn't effect or cause harm to others. Youth and mother continue to process and work through the death of his brother with a therapist. Even thought this situation seems to be a one off incident as a reaction of another peers behaviors, youth and family have expressed and great amount of remorse for his behavior. He has since apologized and him in the other student are able to coexist on the football team together.